PARADIP PORT AUTHORITY - LAND MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

Land management is the process by which the resources of land are put to good effect. It covers all activities concerned with the management of land as a resource both from an environmental and from an economic perspective. It can include farming, mineral extraction, property and estate management, and the physical planning of towns and the countryside

Land management systems are important business integrations that are incredibly useful for tracking lease data, ownership, and permits, as well as managing surface and mineral tract data and recording well information

These systems are administrative in nature, and they take the pressure off individual business owners and team members to accurately record all of this information and use it to their fullest advantage

As management is the human activity meaning the action of people working together in the aim to accomplish desired goals, land use management is a process of managing use and development of land, in which spatial, sector-oriented and temporary aspects of urban policy are coordinated

Resources of land are used for different purposes, which may produce conflicts and competitions, and land use management has to see those purposes in an integrated way. Therefore, land management covers the debate about norms and visions driving the policy-making, sector-based planning both in the strategic and more operative time spans, spatial integration of sectoral issues, decision-making, budgeting, implementation of plans and decisions and the monitoring of results and evaluation of impacts

On the right side, there are several technical diagrams: a large circular gauge with a scale from 0 to 210 and a needle pointing to approximately 180; a smaller circular gauge with a scale from 0 to 100 and a needle pointing to approximately 80; and a dashed circular arrow indicating a clockwise direction. In the bottom left corner, there are two overlapping circular arrows, one solid and one dashed, both pointing clockwise.
